Peter and the Wolf

January 2021

Peter lived with his grandfather in a wooden house at the edge of a dark forest. Around the house was a garden and beyond that a meadow and then the dark forest. He had a little bird and a fat white duck who were his friends. Early one morning Peter went for a walk out into the big green meadow. "All is quiet" sang the bird.	The waddling duck followed him out the open gate hoping for a swim in the deep pond. When they reached the pond Peter watched the duck and the song bird arguing about who could swim or fly best. Suddenly a cat caught his eye. The cat crept stealthily towards them, nearer and nearer. "Look out!" shouted Peter.	Just then, Grandfather came out the house. He was angry Peter had gone beyond the meadow. 'It's a dangerous place. Suppose a wolf were to come out of the great dark forest.' Grandfather took him by the hand, led him to the garden and locked the gate. Peter paid no attention to his grandfather. He wasn't afraid.

No sooner had Peter gone than a big grey wolf did come out of the forest! The cat climbed the tree in a flash. The duck quacked and flapped around and the wolf stepped nearer and nearer. She couldn't run fast enough. She couldn't escape and finally he caught her. With one huge gulp he swallowed her.	The cat and the bird stayed up the tree, not too close, while the wolf circled below with greedy eyes. Peter watched everything from behind the garden gate. He fetched a rope and climbed up a tree and along a branch over the wolf below. Peter made a lasso, carefully lowered it down and... caught the wolf by his tail!	Just then some hunters came out of the forest. "Don't shoot!" cried Peter. "I have caught the wolf. We can take him to a zoo". Imagine the procession...Peter then the hunters leading the wolf, then grandfather and the cat with the bird singing happily. "What brave fellas we are. Look what we caught." But what about the duck?
